ABSTRACT

During school year 1984-85, 61,586 Navajo preschool-grade 12 students were enrolled in 241 schools serving the Navajo Nation in Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah. Approximately 62.8% of the Navajo students attended 157 public schools, while 25.4% attended 53 Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) operated schools, 6% attended 9 community-controlled and 22 mission schools, and 5.8% attended preschools under the Division of Navajo Child Development. Navajo student enrollment appeared to be increasing at a rate of 01.4% per year. BIA schools showed the lowest rate of increase (00.7%), with public school enrollments increasing at 01.9% per year and contract school increasing at 3.4% per year. Only two of the 26 public school district superintendents were Navajos. Of the 423 administrators in Navajo area schools, 110 were Navajos, with 64% administering the contract schools. While only 739 of the 4,839 teachers were Navajos, 1,160 of the 1,638 teacher aides were Navajos. A total of 38 schools were accredited by the North Central Accreditation Association: 14 BIA schools, 21 public schools, 2 contract schools, and 1 mission school. Most schools taught Navajo history, government, and culture; and bilingual instruction was delivered by teacher aides in most public and BIA schools. (NEC)

BASIC DATA

One of the objectives set for this year by the Monitoring-Evaluation and Technical Assistance office was to obtain educational data for all schools serving Navajo students that were located on or near the Navajo Nation.

At the beginning of the school year 1984-85, letters were sent to all the schools known to serve Navajo students, requesting basic information. The information requested included enrollment data by grade levels and a breakdown on the number of educational personnel employed by the schools. Where it was necessary the District offices and the BIA Education Superintendents were also sent letters informing them of the information requested of the schools under their respective jurisdiction.

The response by the schools to the request was very positive; only about ten schools failed to respond out of 241 schools with Navajo student enrollment. For the first time, enrollment information was requested of the Mission schools. Also, several public school districts that heretofore have not been requested for information were included (Albuquerque, St. Johns and eight additional school districts in Utah). The Hopi BIA Agency Navajo student and Navajo Child Development enrollment figures are also included for the first time.

This report presents summaries of the information received from the schools, including;

a) Enrollment data for the school systems.

b) Data concerning school personnel.

c) Enrollment trends.

d) Information on bilingual education.

e) Schools that were monitored by Navajo Division of Education.

Noteworthy Aspects of Navajo Area Schools

The conclusions drawn are the results of interviews with several school personnel, personal observation and review of assorted school documents. See tables in this report.

Administrative Personnel:

The number of Navajos occupying the superintendency level positions is very minimal:

(a) For public schools, only two Navajos are in district superintendency positions in a twenty-six (26) school districts area.

(b) BIA education system provides a better prospect for a Agency Education Superintendent aspirant; Example: two Agency Education Superintendents are Navajo out of five such positions in the Navajo Area.

(c) The best prospect for a school directorship position for a Navajo school administrator appears to be in Indian-controlled contract schools where currently there are seven Navajos serving in the directorship capacity.

During school year 1984-85, there were reported 423 school administrators in the schools serving Navajo children in the Navajo Area; 110 of the area school administrators are Navajos. Sixty-four (64%) percent of the Navajo administrator are administering the contract schools.

Instructional Personnel:

There were reported 4,839 teachers teaching in the Navajo impacted schools; 739 of these teachers are Navajos. This represents a slight decline in the number of Navajo teachers in Navajo impacted schools during the span of four years.

The number of teacher aides serving in Navajo area schools during the SY 1984/85 was 1,638. Of this number of teacher aides, 1,160 were Navajos. This represents an increase of 2% during the last four (4) years in the number of Navajo providing teacher aide services.

Navajo Student Enrollment:

Navajo student enrollment in the Navajo Area school systems totaled 61,586 during school year 1984-85.

Approximately 62.8% of the Navajo students attended public schools while 25.4% of the students attended Bureau-operated schools. 6% of the students were served by Mission or Community-controlled schools. 5.8% or 3,532 children attended preschools under the Division of Navajo Child Development.

Utah public schools show an enrollment of 2,434 Navajo students. San Juan School District in southern Utah served the largest number of Navajo students (1,678).

Four Years Trend: Navajo Student Enrollment

The Navajo student enrollment in schools on and near the Navajo reservation appears to be on a very small increase.

After making allowances for the four "first time" data entries, (namely Mission school enrollment data, Arizona and New Mexico Child Development, eight additional school districts in Utah, and Hopi Agency Navajo student enrollment) the Navajo students enrollment appears to be increasing at a rate of 01.4% per year.

The school system with the lowest rate of increase (00.7%) is the BIA schools. The highest rate of increase is the contract schools at the rate 3.4% per year. The public schools Navajo enrollment has increased at a rate of 01.9% per year.

Prior years enrollment data is not available for the Mission Schools, and the Child Development programs. Consequently, we have no basis for assessing enrollment trend for these school systems.

Note: One factor that could invalidate some of the enrollment reports we have received and recorded, is the time factor. When, during the school year the information was rendered, we had requested the 40th day count but some data came late in the Spring.

Number of Schools:

There are a total of 241 schools that serve a significant number of Navajo students; these are schools within four different schools systems, namely public, Bureau-operated, Mission and community-controlled (contract) schools.

Bureau-operated schools	53	schools
Public schools	157	schools
Community-controlled schools	9	schools
Mission schools	22	schools
Total:	241

Accreditation Status of Schools:

There are a total of thirty-eight (38) schools that are reported as accredited by the North Central Accreditation Association:

Eastern Navajo Agency	3 out of 16	schools
Chinle Agency	2 out of 7	schools

Bilingual Education Programs

BILINGUAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS:

To determine the status of bilingual/bicultural education in the Navajo Area Schools, the Monitoring-Evaluation & Technical Assistance office sent questionnaires to all public school district offices, bureau and contract schools in the fall of school year '84-85. The information collected is depicted on the chart regarding Navajo Area Schools with Bilingual Programs. Schools shown on the chart are those that responded as having provision for bilingual instruction. Schools who responded and did not provide for bilingual instruction, and those schools who did not respond at all are excluded from the chart.

INTERESTING CHARACTERISTICS OF BILINGUAL PROGRAMS BASED ON INFORMATION COLLECTED:

1. Most schools have transitional bilingual programs to help students increase their English language proficiency, primarily in elementary grades (K-6).

2. Navajo language is used during instruction to help students build comprehension skills.

3. Bilingual instruction is delivered by teacher aides in most public and bureau schools. In some contract schools, bilingual instruction is delivered by bilingual Navajo teachers.

4. Only three public school districts include Navajo Literacy in course offerings. Bureau schools do not make provision for Navajo literacy in their course offerings. The only school system which provides for Navajo Literacy is the Contract Schools.

5. Most schools appear to teach Navajo History & Government, and the culture. Bureau schools employ foster grandparents who teach Navajo History & Government and the culture.
